Education Majors (College)

This is a completely online-virtual activity. Our test question ideas are formulated offline.

We are presently focusing on only 3 of the 4 free home studies we have online which are specifically engineered to assist our private home heads towards making safer and wiser choices for their families and homes. When residents have a means for testing their own comprehension of what they have studied through these free home educational tools, they tend to retain more. When they opt to use a self-test process for their own learning satisfaction, residents are more inclined to absorb more of what they are studying.

Example: You have another exam to take. You want to pass. How do you do it? You learn as much as you can! When residents opt to use "Self-Tests" they experience the same thing knowing that the more they learn the information they voluntarily decided they need to remember, the higher they will score on their own personal best with the next "Self-Test" in the free online course they are taking. Each online course has several junctures for self-testing on.

The self-test ideas we volunteer to share (which includes you) are further developed by other HGRBS volunteers into actual test questions which residents opt to take to increase their retention of what they learn when they take related online courses. If any or all of your ideas are used, you share the volunteer credit. Also, as an education major, this is good practice towards your degree.

Your ideas for these "Self-Test" questions can really be helpful towards residents self-empowerment for learning as much as they can via our free online courses which can lead towards making safer and wiser decisions about the quality of people they hire to work around their homes. Your help is needed.
